In 2016, Veteran Recruiting introduced single company virtual career fair days, and relaunched as the Veteran Recruitment Center (VRC) Instead of just promoting career fair dates, the VRC now provides access to recruiters to veterans who visit the environment when a career fair is not happening. When a veteran visits a company booth, an email is sent to the designated representative of that company with the veterans contact info, and a brief overview (including resume) The recruiter can login to the booth to chat with the veteran, email or call the veteran, or simply move on if the veteran does not fit that they are looking for at that time.

When a veteran enters the VRC, they are asked two simple questions. “What are you looking to do, and where? When they enter their criteria, they are matched with companies to visit in the VRC. This greatly reduces the amount of time it takes to find jobs they are qualified for, but more importantly, it gets them thinking about companies they may have not considered before entering the VRC.
